Historical Overview

- 38.5 million foreign-born individuals in U.S.
- U.S. as land of native, immigrant, and refugee
- Several waves of immigrants from various continents
- Variations in immigration status: approximately 11.4 million undocumented (DHS)
- Reasons for immigration: search for work, natural disaster, political trauma, family reunification

Growing Population of Children of Immigrants

Children of Immigrants

Vast majority (more than 80%) of 1st & 2nd generation are citizen children

 - 4.5 million
 - Citizen child/ adolescent in mixed-documentation family
- Family/child with ambiguous documentation

Pre-Migration Context

- Consider reasons for why youth migrate (e.g., family reunification, parental employment, education, poverty, war, persecution, environmental disaster)
- Nature of the pre-migration context—access to family and peer support
- Separation from family (e.g., grandparents, relatives) and friends
- Separation from familiar social, cultural and linguistic context
- Hope for a better future for family and for oneself
- Pre-immigration fantasies of the new cultural context

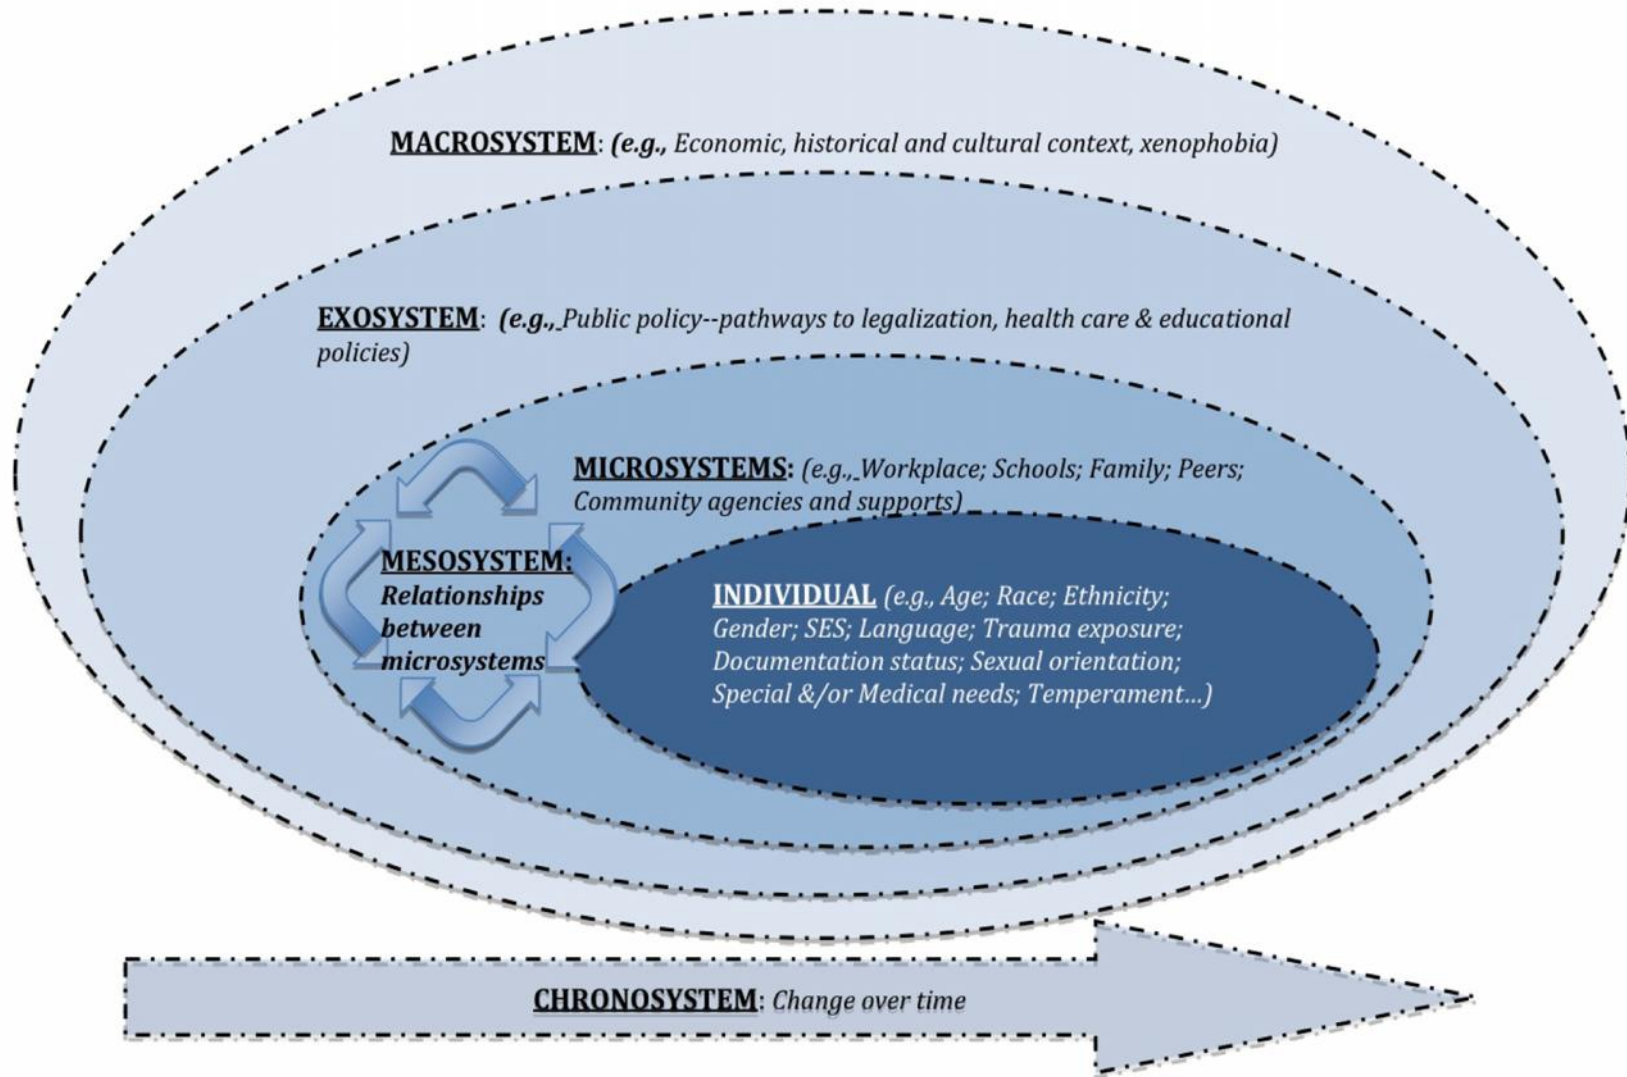

Post-Migration Context

- Importance of migration for whole family and for oneself
- Optimism co-exists with sense of disorientation and sometimes, disillusion
- Complexity of re-uniting with parents from whom child has been separated
- Responsibility of cultural and linguistic translation across generations

Developmental Outcomes

- Educational Trajectories (Abrego, 2006; Gonzalez, 2011)
 - Periodic interrupted schooling
 - Truncated higher education
- Socio-Emotional Trajectories
 - Psychological symptoms
 - Compromised sense of social belonging
 - Complicated identity formation

The Context of Reception

Prevailing Stereotype

“Illegal immigration” overwhelming the nation

Stampedes

Taking our jobs

They force us to change our lives

Anti-Immigrant Sentiment in Contemporary U.S.

- Terrorism
- War
- Proposed ban on Muslims
- Proposed “wall” on the U.S./Mexico border
- Threats to Immigration Reform
- Reluctance to accept refugees

Acculturation

Acculturation

- Psychological acculturation: The dynamic process immigrants experience as they adapt to the new country
- Process of acculturation is stressful
 - Particularly when the two cultures are in conflict
- Acculturation is a process
- Age of immigration matters

Acculturative Stress

- Stressful events/appraisal of events related to the acculturation experience
- Linked to psychological outcomes
- Discrimination is a component of acculturative stress
- Immigrants of color experience higher levels

Behavioral Acculturation

- Children/adolescents
 - American behavioral acculturation occurs rapidly
 - “Overacculturation” – linked to high risk behavior
- Adults
 - Acculturation to host culture gives access to society, institutions
 - Maintenance of heritage culture provides access to cultural resources, social support

Identity Acculturation

- Positive feelings of belonging to culture and society
 - Ethnic identity
 - Includes heritage culture and racial identity
 - National (American) identity
 - NOT mutually exclusive
- Particularly important in adolescence
- “Reactive identification”
 - Discrimination
 - Linked to strong ethnic identity

Family Acculturation Gaps

- Acculturation Gaps:
 - Parents oriented to the Heritage culture
 - Children oriented to Host culture
- Immigrant parents have difficulties with:
 - Understanding and communicating with schools
 - Determining an appropriate level of autonomy and supervision – in new cultural context
- Children may:
 - Not turn to parents with problems
 - View their parents as an obstacle in achieving their goals

Acculturation Gaps: Different expectations for child autonomy

 - Work
 - American peers

Recent study with immigrant-origin high school students

- Tummala-Narra & Sathasivam-Rueckert (2016)
- 64 adolescents (35 girls and 29 boys); 9th-12th grade
- Pride in heritage culture and language:

“I feel really proud of being Latina because I remember after 9/11 a lot of people went to help clean up the city. The most people who went to help were Latinos. They made me feel very proud because we Latinos like to be together, harmony and help each other.”

(Cuban American participant)

- Difficulties in cultural adjustment:

“I didn’t have enough friends when I first moved here because I was different from them. I didn’t know any English so I couldn’t communicate to my classmates.”

(Indian American participant)

“My mom doesn’t know that much English. So, whenever she needs help with English, I need to help her like make phone calls and stuff. My brother used to do that but now he’s in college and so I have to do it now.”

(Sri Lankan American participant)

- Intergenerational Conflicts:

“They’re really strict. Haitian parents are strict. I just want to have American parents sometimes because it would be easier.” (Haitian American participant)

Stereotypes and Discrimination:

“One day, I heard somebody saying that Spanish people are stupid, you know, lazy.” (Honduran American participant)

“When we hear about Latinos it’s, ‘They work really hard in the garden,’ and things like that.” (Cuban American participant)

- Coping:

“It is good to communicate within my own culture. We can talk in our own language.” (Chinese American participant)

“I hate when they [guidance counselors] say that when they will keep it private but then they tell all the teachers.” (Haitian American participant)

“I really wouldn’t talk to someone [adult] from the school ’cause that’s just weird.” (Guatemalan American participant)

“I know a teacher. She’s a Chinese person. She helps many Asian kids, many Chinese kids, even stays after school if someone came and asks for help.” (Chinese American participant)

- Coping:

“I think it just depends on the level of seriousness. If it is something that is pretty small, then I will go to my friends, but if it is something really serious and can affect me or my health or just anything, then I will probably go to my older brother and my parents.” (Haitian American participant)

“I think because you do not want your parents to get worried about you and concerned about you. So, most kids like to keep hiding. I mostly do not tell my parents how I feel. I just put it on my journal and just let it be.” (Cambodian American participant)

What is the best way to acculturate?

Presenting Problems in Clinical and Educational Contexts

- Most immigrants adapt well to their new living circumstances.
- Studies suggest that 1st generation immigrants may experience less psychological distress compared to 2nd generation immigrants (Alegría et al., 2006; Garcia Coll & Marks, 2012).
- It's possible that their psychological distress is going unnoticed.
- Many of the mental health problems particular to the immigrant experience can be linked to acculturation, discrimination and trauma.

- Intergenerational conflicts

- Migratory trauma
 - Pre-migration

Recommendations

- More safe spaces within and outside of the school context for dialogue on cultural adjustment, and how whole school context is involved in this process
- Education concerning cultural and linguistic adjustment with students and their parents/guardians
- Training for school personnel regarding the impact of migration, stress and trauma
- Increasing access to support through building awareness in school community about emotional well-being and how to access help
- Addressing sociocultural barriers—bridging school, family and student
