Educator Roles

What is our Role as Educators?

Undocumented students are often educating themselves, family, and educators on their rights as undocumented students.

Show a supportive space for undocumented and immigrant students

Experience

Undocumented students are scared or unsure about sharing their status, because their livelihood could be impacted.

Educator Role

Include information for undocumented students in different presentations (College, Financial aid, extracurriculars, etc)

Decorate your classroom with posters that show you support undocumented students.

Being a liaison between K-12 and college entities

Experience

Undocumented students are often mislabeled as international and are charged international tuition at college.

Educator Role

Check in with your students to make sure they are being charged correctly, speak with admissions to explain why your student qualifies for in-state tuition (if state allows it)

Make sure to not out your students as undocumented, ask their permission and conditions to share their status.

Remaining up to date on what impacts undocumented student

Experience

Undocumented students are often learning and processing recent implications to their livelihood

Example: The recent DACA decision, Asylum at the border, public charge.

Educator Support

Ask yourself how much do you know about legislation that can impact your students?

Do you need to reach out to a lawyer or community organization to get more information or look it up on google?

Do you need to share with your colleagues?

Educating my colleagues

Experience

Undocumented students rely on educators to know how to help them navigate school and college.

Educators are also overwhelmed and under resourced

Educator Support

Request a professional development related to undocumented students from your administration

Create a network of educators who want to learn more about this and want to educate others

Share resources and tips with educators so you are not the only one.

Next Steps

You are not alone in learning, acting, and advocating with your students.

Reach out for external resources and information.

Form networks with other educators interested in learning more and sharing more.
